The following case study illustrates how Full Choice works:

Employer sets budget

Joe owns a manufacturing company in Providence. He selects a plan that costs $500/month per individual. He decides to contribute $325/month toward the individual premium.

Full Choice

Joe's employees can either pick the health insurance plan he selected or choose another plan, using Joe's $325 contribution to help pay the monthly premium. If the plan they select is more expensive, the employees pay more out of their paychecks. If the plan is less expensive, the employees pay less.

Solutions that work

Joe writes a single check to HealthSource RI for Employers, and his employees can call our Business Engagement Team if they have questions or need support.

Preferred Provider Organization (PPO):

You will pay less if you use hospitals and doctors in the plan's preferred network, but you are often free to see providers who are not in the preferred network.

Health Maintenance Organization (HMO)/ Point of Service (POS):

You agree to use only providers who are part of the network. In some plans, you must choose a Primary Care provider, who coordinates your care.

HOW YOU GET YOUR CARE	METAL LEVEL	PLATINUM	PLATINUM
Some insurers offer plans that include a smaller number of providers that the insurers have decided offer high-quality care at a lower cost. Plans have different monthly premiums and out-of-pocket costs for care, as well as different providers (like doctors and hospitals) you can visit. The providers included in a plan's network — and how those providers are paid for the care they give you — helps determine how much you will pay for your health insurance plan. Some plans assign levels (“tiers”) to doctors and hospitals within their networks, and you may pay less to see providers in certain tiers. When choosing a plan, you should consider the monthly premium, as well as any out-of-pocket costs, providers you prefer to visit, prescription drugs you take, and any other health care needs you have. All plans cover preventive healthcare services at no cost.	HSA QUALIFIED	No	No
